

BLAME DRIVER IN DEATH OF AUTO VICTIM

Baltimore Motorist Likely To Be Charged With Involuntary Manslaughter.

Responsibility for the death of Cornelius E. Vietz, Bloomsburg, fatally injured in an automobile accident at York Springs ten days ago, was placed upon Alex Rostkowski, Baltimore, by a coroner's jury which heard testimony at York Springs, Monday afternoon.

As a result of the jury's verdict, District Attorney John P. Butt today announced that he probably would order Rostkowski's arrest on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Two Witnesses
Vietz died at the Warner hospital last Thursday morning from injuries suffered in the York Springs accident, which occurred Sunday morning, June 24. The victim was one of five occupants of a machine, driven by Earl E. Welliver, Bloomsburg, which, according to witnesses, was struck by Rostkowski's machine at the intersection of the Harrisburg and Carlisle roads in York Springs.

Two eye-witnesses told the coroner's jury about the accident. E. J. Myers, York Springs, testified that neither machine slowed down as they approached the intersection. He estimated the speed of Welliver's car at between 30 and 35 miles an hour and of Rostkowski's machine at about 30 miles an hour as they approached the intersection.

The story of the accident, told by Frank Coulson, York Springs, corroborated that of Myers, except that he estimated the speed of the machines as somewhat slower than the other witnesses.

Failed To Heed Signs
The jury's verdict follows: "That Alex Rostkowski, of Baltimore, in operating his car in a reckless and negligent manner, and failing to heed the slow and danger signs 300 feet from the intersection of the Harrisburg and Carlisle roads in the borough of York Springs, allowed his machine to hit that in which Cornelius E. Vietz, of Bloomsburg, was riding, causing injuries to the said Mr. Vietz which resulted in his death on June 28."

The inquest was conducted by Dr. E. A. Miller, Adams county coroner, at the direction of District Attorney Butt.

On the jury were P. C. Stock, W. E. Olinger, Melvin Little, Norman Irvin, Paul B. Ramer, and C. F. Palmer.

Denies Frolic Will Be Held At Pines Church
The Rev. J. Harold Little, pastor of "The Pines" Lutheran church, today asked The Gettysburg Times to correct an impression which has gained currency in Gettysburg and Adams county that an entertainment, with fireworks, will be held at "The Pines" church, Wednesday, the Fourth of July.

"An advertisement in the classified columns of The Gettysburg Times concerning fireworks and chicken soup everything at The Pines is misleading to a lot of people," the Rev. Mr. Little said. "That advertisement concerns a place along the Carlisle road and does not refer to The Pines church, near New Chester."

"It is unfortunate that another place north of Gettysburg has appropriated the name of The Pines when the church and the community near New Chester have been known by that name for many years."

At the same time, Lunsford was sentenced to serve 10 days in jail on a charge of driving a car with registration plates other than those issued for it and five days for operating a machine without a driver's license. Lunsford took the jail sentences instead of paying fines amounting to $35 imposed by Justice Appller.

Paul E. Ginter, near Bonneauville, whose registration and driver's card Lunsford had when he was arrested Saturday evening behind the Hoffman hotel with two gallons of alleged liquor, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of loaning the license plates of his car to Lunsford, his brother-in-law.

Marvin Chronister, Mt. Pleasant township, arrested and identified as the man who was with Lunsford, Saturday evening, but who escaped just before local police arrested the latter, was released by Justice Appller when he told the magistrate he did not know there was liquor in the machine.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED HERE FOR THE FOURTH

Factories, Court House, Banks and Post Office to be Closed For Day.

Gettysburg will welcome throngs of tourists tomorrow as her contribution to Independence Day celebration. With the pleasant weather of the last three days, restaurant and lodging house proprietors are expecting a "big day" despite the fact that July fourth is a "mid-week holiday" this year. The method of reasoning is that since motorists have been kept at home by the multiple rains of the last month, they will be ready to travel far and wide.

The souvenir and notion stands, restaurants, lodging houses and hotels are preparing for a rush business but practically all of the other stores will be closed for the day. The banks will "shut-up-shop" as will also the courthouse. With the furniture factories already on vacation for the week the other factories will be closed for the day.

The holiday will be observed at the Gettysburg postoffice, with

2 Injured in Headon Crash East of Here

Woman and Child Cut by Flying Glass When Cars Crash; Prefer Charges.

Two automobiles were damaged and two occupants of one of the cars were injured when the machines collided headon on the Lincoln Highway, four miles east of here Monday afternoon.

According to Corporal James W. McCormick, of the Chambersburg state motor patrol sub-station, who investigated the crash, the accident was caused by the improper passing of a truck by Mrs. I. W. Romaine, of Brooklyn, New York.

As the car driven by Mrs. Romaine pulled abreast of the truck, it crashed headon into the car driven by Sam Goldband, of Cincinnati, Ohio, according to the police reports. With Goldband, were his wife and a son. Mrs. Goldband and her son were cut by flying glass, but neither required medical attention.

With Mrs. Romaine were her husband and their son. They were traveling west, while the Goldbands were driving east.

Corporal McCormick took Mrs. Romaine before Justice J. L. Hill, who from a sickbed at his home on Chambersburg street fined the woman $10 and costs on a charge of improper passing.

YOUTH IS HELD FOR TAKING CAR

Waynesboro Lad Arrested in McSherry Car by York Police; Now in Jail.

Byron Kauffman, 18, of Waynesboro, was arrested in York early this morning as he lay asleep in the machine of Attorney William McSherry, stolen on Baltimore street, Monday. A York city patrolman, making his rounds, aroused the sleeper, and asked him for his driver's ownership cards.

Kauffman produced a driver's card, but the ownership card was made out in the name of another person and for another make of automobile. This aroused the suspicions of the officer, and he took Kauffman into custody. The Waynesboro man later confessed to York police that he stole the car in Gettysburg.

Corporal William Kaspervitch and Trooper Kolenolt, of the local sub-station of state police, and Officer George Aughinbaugh went to York and brought Kauffman and Mr. McSherry's car back to Gettysburg. The machine was not damaged in any way.

Kauffman told the officers that he saw the machine standing on Baltimore street, the key to the ignition in place, and decided to take the car for a ride. He drove to York, and wandered about during the afternoon and evening until he became sleepy, and curled up in the machine to rest.

According to the police, Kauffman served two years at Glen Mills reformatory for attempted forgery, having been sent to the reform school from Franklin county in October, 1925. He gave his occupation as painter.

Child Saved From Death By Edward Farrell, Who Beats Out Flames.

BACK IS BURNED

Person Who Threw Explosive Not Known; Child Is Taken to Hospital.

A carelessly tossed fire cracker which exploded and set fire to the summery dress the child was wearing has cut Cecilia Sehrt, 11-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Sehrt, of Washington, D. C., in the Warner hospital, an innocent victim of a pre-Fourth of July celebration.

Only the quick action of Edward J. Farrell, road builder, in overtaking the child as she ran toward the home of Dr. and Mrs. Rudolph Rosenstengel, Lincoln avenue, where she had been visiting with her mother, and rolling her on the grass at his home, corner of Lincoln avenue and North Stratton street, saved the girl's life.

Back Badly Burned
At the hospital where the badly burned girl was taken in the Gettysburg ambulance, it was stated today that her condition was serious, owing to the extent to which her body surface was seared.

The flames, which enveloped the child before Mr. Farrell succeeded in extinguishing them, burned the child's back from her legs to her head. Hospital authorities said they could not yet determine whether Cecilia had inhaled any flames.

The little visitor, who with her mother had just returned from a visit to Chicago and Culver, Indiana, was playing with other children in the neighborhood of North Stratton street and Lincoln avenue early Monday evening.

Dress Takes Fire
Cecilia was pulling little Bobby Fortenbaugh, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Fortenbaugh, and another child in a wagon on North Stratton street, when there was an explosion of a large "shooting cracker" behind her. In an instant, the light organy dress, the child was wearing, was in flames.

Terrorized, Cecilia started to run to the Rosenstengel home, going by way of the alley at the rear of the property. Several panic-stricken women, who saw the girl's plight, called to her to lie down, but the frightened child paid no heed, darting across North Stratton street.

Smothers Flames
Mr. Farrell, who was walking around the lawn of his home, took in the situation at a glance, and immediately started after the blazing human torch. Overtaking the child, Mr. Farrell endeavored to beat out the flames with his hands, but finding that method useless, he threw her on the grass, and smothered the flames by rolling her on the lawn.

Meanwhile, neighbors, who heard the explosion and the girl's agonizing screams, brought sheets in which to wrap her and lotions to apply to the burned portions of her body, most of her clothing having been torn from her body by her rescuer.

Fred Faber, Lincoln avenue, went for the ambulance, and the little victim of someone's carelessness and thoughtlessness was taken to the hospital.

Names "Richard"
Before the ambulance arrived, Cecilia was asked if she knew who threw the fire cracker at her. She said it was "Richard" but efforts to learn from the victim the last name were fruitless.

The theory was advanced that celebrators, passing in an automobile, may have thrown a "shooting cracker" from the car, but no one has been found who saw a machine pass before the explosion set fire. (Continued on Second Page.)

BIRMINGHAM MOTHER CLAIMS CHILD SAID "EAT" WHEN ONLY SEVEN DAYS OLD.

Birmingham, Ala., July 3.—Birmingham has an infant prodigy. YuVawn, 7-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Shotts, converses as well as the average child of 5 or 6 years old, her parents say.

According to Mrs. Shotts, when YuVawn was just one week old she said very distinctly, "Eat! Eat! Eat!" At three weeks old she could repeat many words said to her by her parents. Since the first time she said the word "eat," she repeated a half-dozen words or more each day, until she learned to talk. At two weeks, old she was saying "Daddy" and several other words.

Last December she learned the word "up." Soon after this she learned to say "I want up." Then she commenced forming other short sentences from words she learned from day to day ever since she was a week old. In a little while she learned to say "I want to get up."

The infant's words are perfectly enunciated. One day her elder sister was playing with a hoop when YuVawn said "Look there." The small playmate of her little sister who lives next door she called "little girl." When about two months old her father asked her, "Why do you want to eat?" "Eats are good," said YuVawn. She distinctly called her parents by saying "Mamma" and "Daddy," when she was only three months old. At the age of four months YuVawn was asked by her mother, "Where is Dean?" YuVawn replied, "I don't know."

YuVawn was born November 23, 1927. One of the amazing things about this child is she has cried but twice since she was born. The first time was a few days after she was born, and the other time was when she was ill of colic, March 15.

YuVawn is a normal and healthy child. At birth she weighed eight pounds. Now, at seven months old, she weighs nineteen pounds.

SMITH SILENT ON CAMPAIGN

Looks For Hard Battle, But Will Not Begin Fight Until Later.

New York, July 3.—(AP)—Governor Smith acknowledged today that he expected the presidential race to be a hard fight, but he made it clear that this was not in tribute to any unusual strength of his present political adversary. Smith immediately made plain his realization that the battle must not be begun prematurely. A reporter asked the governor if he had anything to say about his campaign plans.

"Nothing at all," he replied. "What's the use of trying to start the campaign on July 3? Nothing will be decided until the meeting of the Democratic national committee here on July 11."

BRITISH AID IN AMUNDSEN HUNT

Nobile Is Reported In Serious Condition From Hardships and Injuries.

London, July 3.—(AP)—For a brief time yesterday an unconfirmed report was current that the body of Captain Roald Amundsen had been found in the sea off Norway.

This came in the form of a message to the Exchange Telegraph company, purporting to be from Oslo, but definite inquiries at Oslo denied the report.

Thus the fate of the noted Arctic and Antarctic explorer, who went to help search for General Umberto Nobile and his companions in the dirigible Italia, remains a mystery.

Meanwhile, Great Britain has taken a hand in the rescue work. Two large seaplanes, the air ministry announced, shortly would join other searching expeditions in the north. These have been able to find no trace of Amundsen and his five companions, who set out in the French plane on June 18 and disappeared.

There is fear that if Amundsen and the others did not meet death in a disaster of the sea or ice, they will be hard put to it now for provisions. In addition to Great Britain, Norway, Italy, Sweden and Russia are taking part in the search.

Information reaching London from King's bay indicates the Russian icebreaker Krassin, attempting to reach the northwest coast of Northeast Land, where the Nobile radio party and Lieutenant Lundborg, Swedish flier, who rescued Nobile, are stranded, has been blocked by ice, and will try another route.

This means delay, and delay is serious because the ice is breaking up and large channels separate the ice floes.

General Nobile, aboard the base ship Citta di Milano at King's Bay, is said to be in a serious condition, owing to injuries he received when disaster happened to his dirigible and because of the hardships which he had to endure.

to the girl's dress. Several children in the neighborhood had fireworks, but none of them had any which exploded with as loud a report as the one which set fire to the girl's clothes, it was stated. The fire cracker-throwing incident was not reported to the state police, but local authorities are making an effort to find the person responsible for the act.

Rescuer Burned

Mr. Farrell's hands and arms were burned in his heroic effort to extinguish the flames enveloping the child, and it was suggested that he go to the hospital for treatment, but he balked at that and received treatment at home.

Dr. Sehr, who is head of the German department at George Washington university, Washington, was notified of the accident, and came on to Gettysburg. He formerly was connected with the German department at Gettysburg college, and the Sehr family is well-known here.

Police Station Wedding Setting

Reading, July 3.—(AP)—While Louis Crist, 33, an iron worker, was speeding in an automobile to the court house to get a marriage license to wed Clara Rader, 21, he was arrested for running past a traffic signal set against him.

Crist had to wait at the city hall jail until a friend appeared with a cash forfeit and while waiting decided to be married at the police station. George W. Brownback, a turnkey, who was once a Congregational minister, volunteered to do the ceremony and the bride who was waiting consented. They were married at once and the bridegroom was then released.

HOOVER COOL ON DRY QUESTION

Deplores Stressing of Issue at This Time; Prepares Department Budget.

Washington, July 3.—(AP)—Secretary Hoover was forced yesterday to set aside temporarily some of his political cares as Republican presidential nominee in order to work out the department of commerce budget for the 1929-30 fiscal year, for which he must take responsibility as a cabinet officer.

He saw a number of department heads and some representatives of other departments and refrained from carrying any further the preparation of his nomination acceptance speech.

Prohibition Statement Delayed

Occasion was taken at the Hoover headquarters to deplore any stressing of prohibition as a campaign issue at this time. The exact wording of any statement the candidate may make on that subject in his acceptance speech has not been taken up and probably will not be formulated for many days. There will be, it was predicted, no early attempt to take opposition to the stand of Governor Smith, the Democratic candidate, on the question.

That the Republican nominee would declare for enforcement of the prohibition law was taken as certain, but it was further indicated that he would find other issues to be of more importance for stressing in the campaign.

The work of arranging an itinerary for Secretary Hoover's departure to California next week also was postponed because of uncertainty as to his time of leaving.

KLAN INVITES 'AL' TO SPEAK

Asked to Address Gathering at New York Borough on Independence Day.

New York, July 3.—(AP)—Governor Smith was here yesterday for some informal conferences at which he will thresh out the details of his campaign with a few friends.

The Ku Klux Klan has invited the governor to address a gathering of 25,000 members in Queens on the evening of Independence Day. A telegram guaranteed the governor and friends "absolute safety" and gave as the reason for the invitation "the sincere desire of the leaders and members of the Ku Klux Klan to know you more intimately, to see you personally and to hear your presentation of the great issues of the present presidential campaign."

Plans Only 15 Speeches

Smith already has decided to limit his two months' campaign to about fifteen speeches in various parts of the country. They will all be broadcast, and there will be no back-platform talks to station crowds as the campaign train moves from one chosen city to another.

Back on the sidewalks of New York for the first visit since his nomination to the presidency, Governor Smith recalled the days of his boyhood on the Lower East Side.

"I learned to swim down at the foot of Beekman street," he said. "Down by the docks there they had fish cars full of water that they kept turtles on and in which they put any fish that were still alive when the boats came in. When the tops were off those cars there wouldn't be any fish or turtles in them and they made a fine place for a boy to learn to swim."

Water Was Fishy, He Says

"Wasn't the water in those cars sort of fishy?" he was asked. "Oh, yes," he said, "but that didn't bother us any."

"Are you a pretty good swimmer?" a reporter questioned him. "Not now," he replied. "In days we used to swim after the Fulton street ferries to get in the wash of the paddle wheels. I wouldn't like to do that now. When I go in swimming these days I do it where I can put my foot on the ground."

TWO FLIERS DIE IN PLANE CRASH

Lieutenant Commanders at Newport Killed When Plane Goes Into Tail-Spin.

Newport, R. I., July 3.—(AP)—Two naval officers lost their lives yesterday when a navy seaplane, doing a series of loops, plunged 1,000 feet into the harbor. The men were Lieut.-Com. Thibault Nelson Alford, of the U. S. S. Wright, the pilot, and Lieut. William Butler, Jr., of the Gould Island air station.

Commander Alford, strapped to the plane, is believed to have died almost instantly. His body was recovered after the plane had been taken from the water. His flying mate died in the naval hospital here three hours after the crash. He was badly crushed in the fall.

Completes Three Loops

The seaplane had completed three loops and had started the fourth when it went into a tail spin and struck the water with terrific force. Commander Alford was carried below the surface of the water. Butler managed to keep above.

A number of naval boats in the harbor hurried to the spot where the plane struck the water. Butler was taken from the plane but Alford's body could not be extricated. Finally the tug Bobolink hoisted the plane from the water with its derrick and the pilot's body was taken from the cockpit.

Plane Badly Damaged

The plane was badly damaged, having buckled in the middle when it struck the water. Cause of the crash had not been determined, although an investigation was started by naval authorities.

The plane, a Corsair pursuit type, was from the U. S. S. Concord, which is part of the scouting fleet stationed here.

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1923, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS
Captain Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, falls in love with the bewitching Betsy Patterson on a visit to America. Against the advice of his suite he marries her. They sail for France to brave the anger of the Emperor. Betsy is refused permission to land and while she is about to leave the ship a small tug comes alongside. The Emperor has come in person to command Betsy to give up Jerome. Napoleon tells of his ambitious plans for Jerome's future which will be ruined unless she renounces him. Betsy pleads desperately for her love.

"But to give him up for another," Betsy sighed brokenly. "That other is France," Napoleon returned quickly. "No other woman will wrest your image from your heart, and when he understands your sublime sacrifice there will be a halo cast about your memory that not even the glory of his brilliant destiny can dim. In years to come when he looks back upon your sacrifice, he will realize your true worth and your greatness. And is not that far better than to have him forever recalling what might have been had you not given up everything for his sake? More and more he will come to love you with the love that is far stronger than any held Rome? Well, your country is calling for you, calling for you now, and so—and so—" Jerome looked quickly from Betsy to his brother. "So this is what you have done?" He started angrily toward Napoleon, his fists clenched. "This is what brought you here—to make her take part against her self. It is you who have made her do this, I know it."

"No, no, dear, you're wrong," Betsy caught his arm and pulled him back. "Really, you're wrong. Love has sheltered our hearts in such perfect peace since we met that we've been blind to the stern laws of life. We have not realized that there are many other things in the world than our love, and so destiny has come for you, dear; we must keep faith with her—you and I." She swallowed a sob and looked up at Jerome with a smile.

"You—you mean that I am to leave you?" Jerome gazed in astonishment at his wife. "Part from you—from love—that calls me to all that is just in life. Never! Never!" He caught the slight figure in his arms and held it close, gazing at his brother defiantly.

"Ah, Jerome, dear, you must not fall me in this," she stroked his arm tenderly, appealingly. "You mustn't, or all my love for you will have been in vain. Oh, help me, dear, to be worthy of you to the last, so that in after years, just men remembering me must say: 'She would never bring dishonor on the man she loved.' Don't you see that if you do not go, all my life I will feel that I have been the one who has ruined you."

"But, Betsy, I could never think that, no matter what happened," Jerome shook his head. "Give you up? I cannot—I will not! All my life I have been forced to do the things that I had not wanted to do. I am a free, human being, and as such I will consider my own desires above everything else."

"Guard!" Without further ado Napoleon leaned over the side of the vessel and called to the soldiers below. He scarcely glanced at his brother, but before the man could clamber up the ladder Betsy had turned to the Emperor.

"Don't you see he doesn't understand?" she pleaded, frightened. "Don't you see he won't believe me if he thinks it's forever? I must tell him now what we said." She glanced warningly at Napoleon, trying to make him understand that once she had begun her unpleasant task he himself would see it through. "He doesn't understand, sire, that it is only for a little while," she turned to look up at Jerome. "Just a little while, dear, it won't be very long."

"A little while?" Jerome questioned, looking anxiously at his brother, and then at Betsy. "Only for a little while, sweet heart. Did you think it was forever? Did you think I would sacrifice my love forever?" She reached up and caught his face in her hands. "You're only going to leave me for a little while, just until tomorrow—perhaps. No, no, he—he doesn't want you forever, dear. I have only promised to leave him for a little while, my darling."

Napoleon was watching Betsy with open admiration, and her father breathed a sigh of relief as he saw how calmly and coolly his daughter was handling the situation. He, however, believed that she was being truthful, so convincing was her attitude, so certain her words.

"Lend me?" Jerome frowned, looking suspiciously towards his brother. He could scarcely believe that Betsy was telling the truth. It did not sound like his brother's plan because his plans because a woman wept. But his suspicions were allayed by Betsy. "Yes, just lend you," she nodded with a laugh. "If you are there now, in Paris, ready to go on to the Court of Wurttemberg while this alliance is being forced, Princess Fredricka's brother will think that you have given me up—just as if you could." She parted his shoulder, still laughing. "But they will think so, and I shan't mind. I'll know, I'll know, and I'll be so proud of you, Jerome, doing these great things for France and for me, because I am so ambitious for your honor. It's only for this we part, and it's only for a little while."

Jerome held Betsy at arm's length studying her face. "Is this true," he demanded. "You would not tell me if it were not so, would you, Betsy?"

"No, no, dear, it is true," she turned to Napoleon seeking his aid. "Oh, tell him, won't you," she entreated. "Don't you see he doesn't believe me. Tell him it's true. Tell him it's only for a little while we part. Tell him he'll come back to me forever. Tell him that I am not afraid that I know he'll return. Tell him—"

The executive mansion at Albany was the scene of much jubilation following the radio report of the nomination of Gov. Smith to lead the Democratic party at the polls next November. The advice was happily received by the governor, who affectionately turned and kissed his eldest daughter, Mrs. Warner whose husband, Major Warner (sitting on left), also seemed to enjoy the Democratic governor's pleasure.

Do We Neglect Our National Holiday?

Every nation has its sacred memorials which recalls its earliest struggles for its existence. They urge a people on to greatness and from their celebration is derived patriotic feeling and love of country. Just as soon as any nation begins to forget its past, to ignore the worthy and laudable actions of its founders, its decay is near at hand.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TROUBLE

I GET so many letters that tell of trouble. I wish I might settle the troubles of everyone. But how can I when I am unable to settle my own—troubles that are very near and intimate to me?Trouble has always been a mystery to me, probably always will be. But, like everything else, trouble has a solution. I have never known anyone who didn't know trouble. It's something like hunger—always with you.But trouble is a great deal like a bad companion—the more you associate with it, the more it bears down upon you.Trouble has its use. It polishes off faces, gives them the appearance of use and force. We must have something to take the edge off case. I like the sort of people who plough right through trouble. Troubles give us all incentive and courage and make us able to appreciate the beautiful gifts of life. So that when they come, we are able to take them to ourselves.If we didn't get opposition and have to fight our way, little by little, we would not have much respect for ourselves, and when dire emergencies came, we would be apt to run away. But troubles polish our will and teach us to arise from defeat and to stay in the game as something worth while.No wonder that people are not willing to listen to other people's troubles. They have their own troubles—and that keeps their hands full and their ingenuity spurred at all times.I have noted that the bravest people I know are those who have gone through much trouble, but who say little about it.
Some of the happiest folks I know have been those who have borne great burdens—without complaint. That is one reason why they know how to appreciate happiness.Study the life of any notable man or woman and you will find in each case that the story is the same—a series of setbacks and a long period of striving.Happiness should be taken seriously—but not trouble.
There is one thing, however, about telling our troubles to someone else, it convinces us that our own troubles are very few and small—for most everybody else has more troubles than we have.One way to get rid of your troubles is to think out all the many ways wherein you are blessed. That cures most of the troubles of us all.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

A WORD FROM OLD MARRIED
FOLKSBlessings on thee, bride of June,
Long may last your honeymoon!
To our ranks we welcome you,
And the tasks we have to do:Baking, stitching, planning meals,
Mending stockings' toes and heels, Cleaning house, each fall and spring.Building shelves and gardening.
All these chores for man and wife
Make the sum of married life.Bride of June, and happy groom,
Welcome to our joy and gloom,
Love has led you to our doors,
Where we dust and sweep the floors;Paint the kitchen, wash the panes; Purge with lye our stopped up
drains;Scour each kettle, pot and pan;
Work and dream and hope and plan.All these burdens rest for life
On the happy man and wife.In the years which I've before
These are what your parents bore.
All these tasks which I review
Smilingly they did for you.When the honeymoon has gone
You will meet them every one,
But if only love remains
You will laugh at all your pains.And you'll grin at all the jokes
When you're just old married folks.

The big Sunday school picnic,

scheduled for Friday, had to be postponed on account of the heavy down pour of rain. Tobe Moseley says next to the Fourth of July
there is no finer thing in the world than a picnic to break up a drought.Columbus Allison says all an argument is, is where two fellows try to show that one is smarter than the other, when in fact neither one is smart, or they wouldn't waste time in arguing.Washington Hooks says he likes to be accommodating but the only time he'll loan his umbrella is in dry weather, as he is liable to need it any time himself when it is raining.necessary additional teaching will burg, was elected lecturer on anatomy, physiology and hygiene.The attendance of alumni and former students of the college is thought to have been larger than at any previous commencement.There were a number of class and entertainment on Thursday night to the members of his class, several of whom were accompanied by

Little Jack Rabbit

Now, let me think a minute or two. Where did we leave off in the last story? Wasn't it just when the Old Brown Horse was saying that automobiles had left
so many horses without anything to do? Well, anyway, just then the Circus Elephant began to sing
a song he had heard while traveling from town to town:"The circus tent is wide and high,
And it's just like home to me.
And I love to play in the big, round
ring—
Oh, it's there I long to be.""Yes, the things we used to do often seem the best," sighed the Old Brown Horse. "Often I grumbled because I had to draw the old buggy, but now I'd give most anything to be back at my old job.""Yes, that's the way I feel,"
agreed the old circus elephant,
with a sigh that sounded like a gale of wind. "I used to grumble
because I had to stand on my head, but if I could only go back to the circus I'd stand on my tail," and with another tremendous sigh, the old Elephant wiped a tear from his left eye with the tip of his right ear."The cherry pie is baked!" all of a sudden cried Lady Love, the little bunny's mother, from the kitchen window. Goodness me! At the good news you should have seen the little bunny and the old elephant scamper back to the house.
Maybe I shouldn't say that the elephant scampered; he's a littletoo big to scamper,—but he got there just the same, and as soon as they were all seated on the lack steps, Lady Love cut the cherry pie,—Oh, me, Oh, my!
But, goodness me! again. All of a sudden the Elephant began to choke, and tears as big as silver dollars fell from his eyes. Pretty soon there was a big puddle on the ground for Mrs. Duck to swim in."Let me pound you on the back," cried kind little Lady Love. "You must have swallowed a cherry pit the wrong way!" But, although she pounded with all her might, itdidn't seem to help matters a bit.
Dear, dear, he grew black in the face. I mean, he grew blacker in the face, for he was black anyway, you know."What shall we do?" cried the little rabbit, growing dreadfully worried about his big, kind elephant friend.

Mrs. Duck, and pushing her long of her? Well, I just guess it was."A cherry pit's a little thing, bucket of water, and in the next story you shall hear what happen-

FOUR baths a year—how's that for a standard of cleanliness? A progressive citizen of a provincial village in France

recently built a bath house, expecting to sell season tickets for one bath a week to all the villagers.

At length the wealthy families agreed to buy season tickets for one bath a month,

but soon the novelty wore off and they demanded part of their money back on the ground that one bath in three months was adequate. The bath house was finally pronounced a business failure.

Well, a public bath house probably wouldn't prosper in the average American small town either—but for a very different reason. Here, nearly every home has its own bathing facilities, and even the weekly bath is considered inadequate. The efficiency of gas water heaters is, of course, partly responsible for the luxury of frequent bathing in America. Where there is plenty of hot water on tap, bathing becomes as much a pleasure as a health necessity.

Why should the woman pay?

Why should any woman pay 50 cents for a half-pint of liquid insect-killer? When she can get just as much Black Flag—the deadliest insect-killer known—for only 25 cents! (Money back if not satisfied). Black Flag comes in 2 forms—liquid and powder. Some prefer Black Flag Liquid to kill flying pests—flies, mosquitoes, etc. But Black Flag Powder to kill crawling pests—roaches, bed-bugs, fleas, ants, etc. Powder, 15 cents up.

Leaving No Will

Needless suffering, bitterness and despair are often expressed in the words—"He left no Will."

The business futures of many young men have been impaired by inheriting wealth before they knew how to use it.

The guiding hand of a trained Trustee during their early years would have protected them.

In this connection, attention is invited to the exceptional facilities of the Trust Department of this institution.
